LANDSCAPES

 A landscape is a combination of elements such as living things, weather and man-made features that can be seen in one particular area.

For example, mountains, hills, rivers, oceans, deserts and lakes.  All these are examples of what we call a natural landscape.  A mountain is very different from a desert!!! Think about it!

They have different weather , animals and plants!

 Some landscapes are man-made. It means that they were built by people and have a purpose. For example, bridges, buildings, reservoirs and dams. Man-made landscapes appear as a result of human activities.

 Think of all harbours, cities and farms!

 Man-made landscapes take over the natural landscapes and slowly change the habitat of many animals and plants.
